

Letter from the Editor

This year has flown by in the blink of eye! If you feel like you haven't held us in your hands for a while, it's because you haven't.

We decided to only run the Spring Issue last year, as the planning for our Fall Issue was right in the thick of things. We really weighed the pros and cons and decided that staying safe and keeping our advertisers safe was our top priority. Now that regulations have been steady and maintained for some time, we felt it was the perfect time to be back.

We could not be more excited to be back and so was everyone involved in this issue. It really felt like a "coming together" with businesses in our community. Behind the scenes, these businesses really went through a lot this year and are eager to see you again, if it's in person, for curbside pickup or a phone call. They are here for you!

This past year has really put things into perspective for us and most people. We will carefully consider where we spend our money and how that supports our community and local families. It's not just local businesses, there are lots of great employers in our community that put a roof over our heads and food on the table. We are all in this together!

We have always been a supporter for our community, and that is really where the idea for this magazine came from. We want to help businesses showcase their craft to our readers and work hand in hand with them in order to do that.

We want to thank our readers for all their support, keep the emails and phone calls coming because I love to refer great businesses!

We hope you enjoy this issue,
Jaime-Lynn and Stewart Dyck

Coming Together
