

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Are you a weekend warrior? We certainly are. There's something deeply satisfying about tackling projects on our own, transforming spaces with our own hands, and seeing the tangible results of our labour. If you have some skill and the right tools, you can save money in the long run and create something truly unique.

But let's be honest – the work of a weekend warrior is never really done. Just when we think we've completed a project, there are always touch-ups to do and maintenance to keep up with. Perhaps it's the nature of home improvement – there's always something to improve, update, or reinvent.

Being a weekend warrior means embracing the idea that your home is a constant work in progress. It's a living, evolving reflection of your hard work and creativity. Every weekend brings a new opportunity to make your space better, whether it's a fresh coat of paint, a new piece of furniture, or a garden project.

So here's to the weekends! To the projects that keep us busy, the skills we hone, and the satisfaction of a job well done. Let's continue to embrace the challenges and joys of being weekend warriors, finding pride and purpose in every nail hammered and every brush stroke painted.
